

The report was received that Chambers had killed Bowman. Mr. Chambers after the killing sat quietly on the porch. The Sheriff, on arriving in answer to the telephone, said to him: "Mr. Chambers, I have come to place you under arrest." He said: "That's all right and according to the shooting had been done, and Mrs. Eliza B. Hudson got it. The gun had been in the corner, behind a wardrobe, in the family sitting-room. Both barrels were empty. Mr. Chambers said he had been a son of one of the most prominent men in the city. The other man had escaped while out hunting in the morning. The body was put in a covered wagon. Chambers got into the Sheriff's office and told him: "I am glad to see you."

"On the way over," said Sheriff Dosenbach, "we talked about a great many things, but said not word about the killing. We have no evidence to sustain our charge against Mr. Chambers, for we understand that he has had a great deal of litigation in the St. Louis courts. The papers we sent out have from Louisburg we would serve them Garrett nearly always took them over, and Mr. Chambers spoke of the gentlemanly way he had been treated. We were quite pleased on the way over to Clayton and did not seem at all disturbed by what had occurred.

THE BODY of Frank J. Bowman, when it arrived in Clayton, was taken to the Court-house and laid out in a canvas cot in the office of Justice of the Peace. The body was dressed in a suit given to it and a Deputy Sheriff stood at the door to guard it. Many curious people tried to obtain a view of the corpse, but were denied. No one who knew Frank J. Bowman would recognize his face to-day. The head is so torn that the load of shot fired into it that not one feather is left in it. The shot entered the left temple, tearing a hole four inches in diameter. The charge left the head an inch back of the right temple, tearing a hole three-quarters of an inch wide, and the mouth away. No mortician keeper ever saw quite ghastly a sight. Frank J. Bowman never heard the explosion that preceded his fall, but his face was so disfigured that what splashed with blood, but otherwise uninjured. In the Sheriff's safe is the gun with which Chambers killed the man. It is double-barreled and shotgun. The left barrel contained a load of coarse shot as the powder ridges are wide apart. The right barrel contained a load of fine shot, but understood that Bowman was killed by the discharge from the left barrel. An attempt was made to secure from Mr. Chambers of his case. He was seated in the Sheriff's office at Clayton talking to his nephews, Charles and Joseph Chambers. He smiled pleasantly when the question was put to him if he had been a newspaper man himself. He referred to his connection with the new edition. "Times," he said, "I could not get into the paper, but still did not allow his nerves to overcome him. He has seen all the papers, but he has not taken up any case as Mr. Madill had advised him to do. He could not say who his attorney would be, for Mr. Madill had advised the employment of attorney, and intended to draft a brief to take charge of his defense. He had not been employed. H. D. Laughlin, his attorney, who would be in charge of the remains, he said I told him Mr. Laughlin, who had been his friend for many years, was not available for this case, and the Sheriff. My friends are now discussing the employment of counsel for me. Beyond that Mr. Chambers would not say anything about his case. The Sheriff's office is the only study of the Sheriff; he is not subjected to confinement in the jail, but is permitted to meet his friends and talk with them without interruption at any time in the Sheriff's office.

The Story of the Killing.

The news of the killing did not reach the city until nearly 5 o'clock, but the facts were given fully in the Post-Dispatch extra, issued at 5:30. The killing was one of the most sensational that ever occurred in St. Louis or vicinity. As the rumors of it spread they soon became more and more ghastly, and should have at last met resistance in enforcing his demands, by his peculiar tactics, and that the encounter should result in his death, was something that the public minded to believe.

THE DEPUTY'S FRIGHT.

Deputy Garrett was surprised that he witnessed the shooting, is not in harmony with the version given by members of the Chambers family. He says the officer left him, and that he did not know, and could not conceive of any reason, though requested to do so, and then he was led by a member of the family that Mr. Chambers desired to surrender himself. In this he was wrong, and it is believed, to quickly as possible, and from there telephoned to Sheriff Dosenbach at Clayton, summoning him to the scene of the tragedy. His story of the killing is that he was summoned as a very quiet and inoffensive man, who would bear abuse without offering physical resistance to the very last. The Post-Dispatch extra, however, brought confirmation full and complete.

CAUSE OF THE TROUBLE.

The shooting took place on grounds of the Chambers-Hudson residence on Florissant Avenue and Chambers road. Bowman had an old judgment against Chambers which he desired to collect before he came to St. Louis to Dosenbach to make an attachment. Falling at the office of the Sheriff at Clayton in the morning he secured the necessary papers, and went to the office of the Sheriff, and Deputy Sheriff Charles. Garrett was assigned to accompany him to Mr. Chambers' residence and make the attachment. The transaction was soon completed, and was performed by the deputy alone, but it was an event which Bowman had long looked forward to, and he desired to be on hand. Deputy Garrett, however, was in high spirits, and seeing Chambers on the porch, he asked him to go with him to Ferguson from Clayton. Arrived at Mr. Chambers' residence, and the two men, Mr. Chambers was called to the door and the officer made known the object of his visit and formally demanded payment of the judgment. Chambers refused to pay, and the deputy, who had no money and that Bowman should know that. With the number of heavy judgments hanging over him he did not have any, and when the officer asked him if he could not understand anything, he was reported to Bowman on the scene.

BOWMAN ON THE SCENE.

The latter then accompanied him to the house and repeated his demands in peace, but entirely unfounded. All of his passion seemed to have passed away during the course of the interview, and he killed the man whom he had as his persecutor. He was cool and deliberate in all his actions after that. Seating himself in a chair, he took off his coat, and, in a manner that I judged, that they had fixed the whole matter up. Bowman walked into the house, and Chambers followed him into the house. He walked back towards the rear and he walked into his left. Through the window I saw him take something from the body before he had gone into the room. When he rushed out of the hall with his shotgun in hand and shouted to Bowman.

"Get off of my place; I'll give you just three minutes to get off of my place," he said.

"I shouted to Mr. Chambers:

"Don't do that, don't do that."

"He turned out of my place, and just at that moment he emptied his gun in Bowman's face. Chambers looked like a madman and I ran to the telephone. Sheriff Dosenbach and I immmediately started for the residence of the reverend father. That night we were unable to find Bowman, and he had been carefully kept from her until the arrival of the reverend father. Sheriff Dosenbach, however, and without the aid of a posse, any assistance, and without Chambers under arrest. The latter surrendered calmly, simply requesting that the trip to Clayton be delayed until the arrival of the reverend father. This request was readily granted.

Garrett, on my part, was waiting for him to the house to take cup of coffee. On the arrival of the reverend father, he said that the news would be broken gently to his aged mother, and that she would be comforted, announced his resolution to go with the officer.

The Sheriff determined also to take the body of Bowman, still laying where he fell, to the county seat. Coroner Cawley also invited the Sheriff and the members of the Chambers family thought it desirable that he should view the body before it was buried. Sheriff Dosenbach said to the reverend father: "I will do that." The reverend father, however, had no time to go to the cemetery, but his friends wisely advised him to let it alone and wait for the officers. That, I think, is about the whole story as well as I can get it from Dosenbach.

THE DEPUTY SURPRISED.

From the time that the deputy concluded they had arrived at a settlement, concluding their conference the two men concluded Chambers entering the house and Sheriff Dosenbach the deputy was walking to the latter's wagon. The deputy, following Chambers with his eye as he entered the house, was still aware of Bowman's orders as he had been. Still looking after Chambers as he saw him take something from a bureau or mantel, and then retraced his steps to the door. The shooting was the abrupt with which Bowman had few moments later, killed. Reappearing at the door Chambers was very much excited. His manner was frenzied and the determination of a mad man was pictured on every feature. It was evident at once that

There was to be trouble, and the deputy had no desire to participate in it. His account of what occurred later is somewhat at variance with the statement of others, and probably with the facts as he was so greatly excited that he could not have any very clear idea of what transpired.

TO THE WALL.

It is evident, however, that in the quiet conversation on the steps Chambers had been pushed to the wall, and felt that he had been beaten. He was then pulled up, and remarked jokingly that he had formerly been a newspaper man himself. He refers to his connection with the new edition. "Times," he said, "I could not get into the paper, but still did not allow his nerves to overcome him. He has seen all the papers, but he has not taken up any case as Mr. Madill had advised him to do. He could not say who his attorney would be, for Mr. Madill had advised the employment of attorney, and intended to draft a brief to take charge of his defense. He had not been employed. H. D. The Sheriff's office is the only study of the Sheriff; he is not subjected to confinement in the jail, but is permitted to meet his friends and talk with them without interruption at any time in the Sheriff's office.

TESTIMONY OF WITNESSES.

The deputy obeyed the command instantly, and got off the place as rapidly as his legs could carry him. He says, however, that he was not afraid, and that he was not afraid to return to the wall, and that he was immediately given his warning to him. The charge of shot entered Bowman's cheek, and he fell dead where he stood. The members of his family, who were there, three of his sons, and his wife, gathered what information he could and made a succinct statement. Those who were about the place at the time of the killing were all in a state of alarm, and this testimony told the sheriff as far as he could tell him, that he was ready to draw a weapon before Chambers fired.

CHAMBERS HEARD THE REMARK, BUT WAS DETERMINED, AND SIMPLY ANSWERED.

Chambers heard the remark, but was determined, and simply answered: "Don't do that!"

Garrett, however, was terribly in earnest, was evidently his master, and leveling it at Bowman.

Deputy Garrett says he was paralyzed with astonishment, but recovered himself sufficiently to call out to his wife, "Get off my priest."

"Don't do that, don't do that!"

Chambers heard the remark, but was determined, and simply answered: "Don't do that!"

Garrett obeyed the command instantly, and got off the place as rapidly as his legs could carry him. He says, however, that he was not afraid, and that he was not afraid to return to the wall, and that he was immediately given his warning to him. The one who might have seen and known what occurred, ran away. The priest went to the door to bid him good-by. Chambers, who was old enough to understand, gathered what information he could and made a succinct statement. Those who were about the place at the time of the killing were all in a state of alarm, and this testimony told the sheriff as far as he could tell him, that he was ready to draw a weapon before Chambers fired.

TESTIMONY OF WITNESSES.

The story of the killing of Bowman and all the incidents that followed are such as soon lead up to such a bloody end, and a long time will be spent in brief. But the facts were few.

The one who might have seen and known what occurred, ran away. The priest went to the door to bid him good-by. Chambers, who was old enough to understand, gathered what information he could and made a succinct statement. Those who were about the place at the time of the killing were all in a state of alarm, and this testimony told the sheriff as far as he could tell him, that he was ready to draw a weapon before Chambers fired.

GARRETT'S FIRST STATEMENT.

The first story told by Deputy Sheriff Charles Garrett was a strange one. It was told on the ground floor of the building.

He says that he started out with Bowman at 10:30 o'clock to levy an attachment under a judgment for $25,000 on Chambers' property. He was followed by Sheriff Dosenbach, and proceeded to Chambers' place, which was about two miles from the station. They had some men who had been working at the house. Mr. Chambers was at home, and went on to the house. A lady came to the door and told them that Mr. Chambers would not be home for some time. ## ALL PULLING TOGETHER

TO DRAW THE INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION TO ST. LOUIS

An Important Meeting of Business Men and Capitalists Held To-Day at the Mercantile Club—Those Who Have Not Subscribed to the World's Fair Fund Coming to the Front.

AT 4 o'clock this afternoon an important meeting was held at the Mercantile Club in the interest of the World's Fair. The members of the Executive and Finance Committees met the citizens invited by letter to consult with them in reference to advancing the interests of St. Louis in its candidacy for the international exposition of 1893. A list of those who were invited to attend the meeting appeared in the Sunday Post-DISPATCH.

The principal object of the gathering was to impress the capitalists and large real estate owners of the city in the association, and to obtain their subscriptions to the World's Fair fund. The merchants and business men have done far more than had been either expected or asked of them, but the large property-owners who are not personally engaged in active business have so far not done their share of the work in which all are interested. This is said to have arisen not from any disinclination to contribute, but from the fact that the matter has not yet been properly brought to their notice. The meeting was addressed by Frank Galenke, who spoke of the efforts made by New York and Chicago to secure the World's Fair, of the advantages possessed by St. Louis and of the growing strength of this city in the country at large. Mr. Galenke has recently returned from Louisville where he met the excursion party of twenty-five sent out by Chicago to influence the citizens of the Southern States in favor of Chicago. He stated that the feeling in Louisville was strongly in favor of St. Louis, and that the visit of the Chicago delegation produced no effect. The necessity of energetic work was dwelt upon by Mr. Galenke and several other speakers, and those present at the meeting pledged themselves to devote their best efforts to the promotion of the interests of St. Louis. Subscription books were circulated at the close of the meeting, and very large contributions were made.

Last night the furniture dealers met, F. J. Comstock taking the chair and reported that a large part of the $50,000 allotted to him had been obtained. The retail grocers, A. Moll, chairman, also reported that the $50,000 assigned to him had been entirely secured. The LETTERS OF INVITATION.

The following is the invitation extended by the World's Fair Committee to those who attended the meeting at the Mercantile Club on Monday, Oct. 15, to meet the Executive and Finance Committee in conference:

DEAR SIR.—The undersigned request you to meet us at the Mercantile Club at 4 p.m., Tuesday, October 23, for the purpose of considering the revision of the World's Fair exhibition in St. Louis. The different committees which have had the work in hand for the past two months have done a good deal, but there is still much yet remains to be done. Other cities are competing actively for the location, but we think that with a proper effort St. Louis can be successful. We hope that the co-operation and counsel of such representative and experienced citizens as yourself, as we consider that your interest in the success of the fair will be shared by those of us who have already given much time and labor to the work. We trust you will not fail to attend at the time and place above mentioned, but in event of your not doing so, please advise Frank Galenke, Recording Secretary, at the World's Fair headquarters, Broadway and Locust street, to that effect. Respectfully,

D. H. FRANCIS,
Chairman Committee of Two Hundred.
F. J. SWANSON,
Chairman Finance Committee.

Gov. Foraker's illness.

COLUMBUS, Oct. 22, 10 a. m.—Gov. Foraker rested quietly last night, and Mrs. Foraker says he had the best night's rest since he was taken sick. She says, however, that he has taken no food, and possibly will not be able to eat again for several days to come. Mrs. Foraker speaks very encouragingly as to his condition. Dr. Kinsell, attending physician, says the Governor is still a very sick man.

Dying Confession of the Celebrated Confidence-Man and Swindler.

DENVER, Colo., Oct. 22.—Frank Pine, alias Geo. Hall, the celebrated confidence man and gold bribe schemer, made his dying confession last evening at his residence in this city in the presence of witnesses and a notary public. The documents, two in number, were for City Auditor Wuram of Kansas City and John F. Bell of the same city. Wm. J. Brewster claims to have been defrauded out of $10,000 cash and $20,000 on a note given him in payment for services rendered in the construction of Pima County, Arizona, which was found to be worthless. Brewster claims Wuram was a party to the fraud, in that he recommended Pine and spoke highly of his character. A suit for $20,000 damages is pending in Kansas City against Pine. Wuram and E. Bell, who is also in the name of Geo. Hall, and Fatty, owner of the property, Pine, in his confession, states positively that Auditor Wuram and John F. Bell had nothing to do with the defrauded amount and that they were not parties to the scheme. He says Fatty was an Englishman, who, when he received his money, started on a trip to Europe. In statement to reporters he said he was living in New York, where he had an alleged confession published regarding his connection with the robbery of President Moffat in his safe of $100,000, and that he had given it to several other statements published in the papers during the past few weeks. The doctors say he cannot live more than a week.

A Meeting to Make Chicago a Distributing Point for Florida.

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 22.—A largely attended meeting of the wholesale fruit dealers of Chicago was held yesterday at the Provision Exchange, at which Gen. A. S. Mann of Jacksonville, Fla., was present, to formulate a plan to make this city the distributing point for Florida fruits for the Northwest and the States west of Ohio. He said the fruit growers of the State had arrived at the conclusion that it was time to find a market for their surplus produce and to come into the towns and villages throughout the Northwest. He proposed, as the spokesman of the shipper of Florida, who had 10,000 boxes of oranges and 100 boxes of pineapples, to contract with merchants of Chicago to make the distribution from here. Before the meeting adjourned it was decided that the first delivery in Florida would be to a combination of 100 dealers in the small towns. To facilitate trade a daily trade bulletin will be issued from Florida shippers informing the distributing merchants of the quantity and quality of fruit that have been shipped and where to, so they can guard against overstocking.

The Woman Suffragists to Concentrate Their Forces in South Dakota.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 22.—Susan B. Anthony has returned from South Dakota. It is an interview she said: "The State of South Dakota is the place of all others in the United States to which we are going to turn our attention. The State is bound by its constitution to submit the question of universal suffrage a year from this time, and we are going to concentrate our forces in that State for this time on. All the best speakers, all the best workers in the woman's suffrage ranks in the West are to be found in South Dakota. We have every assurance that we are going to carry the day. We have never before had such an opportunity. The fact is that the West is the home of liberal Westerners who did not come from the conservative East. We will not have to work with them as we would the people in the East, for the West is turning up to the fact that woman's suffrage has come; that it is no longer an experiment."

AM. ART, Eighth and Pine sts.*War on Lebanon's Saloons.

By Telegraph to the Post-DISPATCH.

LEBANON, Mo., Oct. 22.—The Woman's Christian Temperance Union, which has done but little active work for some time, save the oratorical contests for the Demosthenes Medals, at which little boys and girls were speakers, is arranging to make war on the saloons run here in open violation of the local option law, four in number. The organization, which, when Ras Davis opened a series of lectures, is a notorious fact that drunkenness is more prevalent among the saloon keepers than those licensed saloons are run, and the traffic in Sunday liquor selling pretty nearly equals the business for the entire week.

"I HEARTILY recommend Dr. Eano Sander's Tenfold Carbolic Acid Water, and recommend it's preference to the imported Carbolic acid water and its salt."

GEORGE J. BERNATZ, M. D.*Ready to Receive.

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 22.—A local paper says: The Belford-Clark Publishing Co., will resume business in a few days. Their financial difficulties are about adjusted; the creditors having all, excepting one, agreed to a full sign and seal. Thomas, the Belford-Clark affair, is about settled and in less than a week, I am told, he will give the basis of compromise yet, but I will say, it is fair and satisfactory all around.

THE BROTHERHOOD PLAN.*HOW THE PLAYERS INTEND TO CIRCUMVENT THE MAGNATES.

Anson the Only Old League Player to Sign a Contract Yesterday.—The League Signs Minor League Men—Charges That Reagan Was Afraid of Mitchell—The Brews Defeated—Sporting News.

By Telegraph to the Post-DISPATCH.

NEWS YORK, Oct. 22.—It is definitely ascertained that the annual meeting of the Brotherhood of Base Ball Players is to be held in this city on Monday, November 4. This is ten days previous to the League meeting, and whatever schemes the Brotherhood have in process of incubation will be popped at their coming congress. In course of a conversation yesterday, John M. Ward said that the reports from the West that the League magnates were interested in any way with the Brotherhood were utterly without foundation.

"They may be interested in some scheme of mine," he said. "But not one of the men in question has ever been approached by a Brotherhood man."

"What do you think of the statement made by the League officers and others that the Brotherhood scheme will fall through?" was asked.

"I do not know what Brotherhood scheme you refer to," replied Ward. "As far as their statements are concerned I think they are foolish as can be. They jump before the public and postulate a theory or a scheme which they call a 'Brotherhood plan.' Then they start it to pieces and claim that it will never work. Four-fifths of the talk about alleged Brotherhood schemes emanate from the hair-brained Western newspaper men. If the base-ball players of the League should make up their minds to play ball for men with just as much money and an amount of brains equal to that possessed by the League people, can they be prevented? I think not. You see I do not bring the Brotherhood into the case at all. I am merely supposing a case. The team can represent players within League limits, but they can no more prevent a player from playing with another organization than they can prevent him from earning a livelihood by keeping a hotel or driving a dray. The Brotherhood is, of course, interested in protecting the players. That is its sole and only object."

The Players Refuse to Sign.

Yesterday was the day on which the League players were to be presented contracts to sign for next season. In nearly all League cities contracts were presented the players, but with a few rare exceptions none of them signed.

"We could not accede to the dictum of justice," was the reply. "If the League could not show good cause for its action I am afraid there would be very few League games next year."
